Chef Mark McLean to Appear on Spike TV Series “Frankenfood”

NY-Metro-based chef and restaurateur to compete for a place on Jefferson Diner menu + $10K

New York, N.Y. – “Growing up in a house of four boys, you have to learn to fend for yourself sometimes,” says Chef Mark McLean, founder and proprietor of the New York/Metro-based Remarkable Cuisine, and owner of the forthcoming Newark Social restaurant in New Jersey.

“Innocently, I was a sous chef in fourth grade. With such an early background in holding a spatula, the rest became easy. My first menu came from my mother’s request to make dinner.”

Chef Mark has come a long way since, and this Sunday, June 29, 2014, 10:30 p.m., on Spike TV’s unconventional cuisine series, “Frankenfood,” Chef Mark will demonstrate his highly developed expertise for creating improvisational and eclectic dishes – astounding even the eccentric tastes of series hosts, Josh Capon & Tony Luke Jr.

In the episode, titled “Taste of the Turnpike,” Chef Mark McLean and a group of New Jersey cooks compete for a spot on the menu at the legendary Jefferson Diner, and a $10k prize. “It was a lot of pressure, but a whole lot of fun,” said Mark, whose Newark, N.J.-based restaurant, Newark Social, will debut during the summer 2014 season.
